

Sarah Ash Simpson
Assistant Director, Regulatory Affairs
Indiana State Department of Agriculture

Sarah Simpson is the Assistant Director for Regulatory Affairs at the Indiana State Department of Agriculture. Her responsibilities include working with other state agencies to improve Indiana's regulatory structure as it relates to agriculture. In addition, Sarah is responsible for oversight of the Indiana Land Resources Council, which provides guidance to counties on land use issues. She also serves as Interim Director of the Indiana Grain Buyers and Warehouse Licensing Agency.

Prior to joining ISDA, Sarah worked for her family's hog production business, Yeager & Sullivan, Inc., in Carroll County. She also worked as a summer law clerk for a federal judge as well as a legal intern for Indiana Farm Bureau, Inc. Sarah received her bachelor's degree from Purdue University in management in 1999, and her juris doctor from Valparaiso University School of Law in 2005. She was raised on a horse farm in Lafayette, Indiana. Sarah and her husband currently reside in Carmel.